Long live freedom of expression! Freedom! Freedom!" Place Bellecour is full of people Wednesday night in honor of the victims of the shooting in the offices of Charlie Hebdo. The rally organized by the Press Club of Lyon in 18 hours drew more than 10,000 people according to police. In the crowd, signs "I'm Charlie," pens in the air and slogans that come pierce the silence.

At the forum succeed Mayor of Lyon and President of the Press Club, and every speech, sustained applause sound. Present to show their support, Mathieu Mimicking is episodic buyer of the satirical magazine. "I've always liked Charlie Hebdo, not only the press that they kill, it is the Republic, he let go. You have to show solidarity, these people died for freedom.
